AUTHOR'S NOTE

2020. COVID. My husband JJ says, "Listen to this band, The War and Treaty, I think you will love them." The minute I heard their first song, I was enthralled. The more songs I listened to, a musical started forming that I couldn't ignore. I reached out to them with my idea to use their songs in writing a musical about hope, unity, perseverance and love and they gave me their blessing.

Little did I know that what I wrote starting in 2020 as a slightly dystopian future' would be coming frighteningly to life in 2026. In December of 2021, I had the first reading in my living room thanks to some kind and talented friends. We also wrote an original opening number to establish the world of the play. Next came rewrites and, thanks again to talented friends as well as a grant from the Arts Council of Wilmington, we did a seated reading of the book in Wilmington, NC for a small invited audience.

And so here we are...a staged reading in Nashville - the city that was my home for 13 years. The city where I founded Street Theatre Company in 2006 - a company that is still thriving today under Artistic Director Randy Craft. And with the help of Randy and so many others, we get to see and hear the piece performed by some O.G. STC performers as well as new faces!

One of the things that truly does feel like a dream come true is that when I wrote this show, I always pictured Chris Lee as Marcus. I had the joy of directing Chris at STC back in 2016. He has since gone on to perform on Broadway and TV. I took a leap and asked him if he could possibly do the reading and he said yes!

I am so grateful to the people who have read it, sung it, and encouraged it along the way. With so many of us feeling more isolated than ever, I think the time is now for this musical that speaks to the power of community and
